Head-on wreck hurts five on Fox Creek Rd.

From staff reports

Five people sustained injuries in a head-on collision last Wednesday morning on Fox Creek Road. Trooper Trevor Harris with the Kentucky State Police said the accident occurred when Crystal Puckett of Lawrenceburg, driving a 2002 Mercury Mountaineer, dropped off onto the north shoulder of Fox Creek Road while traveling west. Puckett overcorrected and veered into the eastbound lane, colliding head-on with a 1996 Buick Century being operated by Steven Cox of Pleasureville. The Mountaineer spun around and eventually came to a stop in the eastbound lane, Harris said, while the Buick crossed over into the westbound lane and struck a utility pole.

Health board puts budget, personnel cuts on hold

Proposed contraception reductions cause concerns

By Meaghan Downs
Staff writer

It's back to the drawing board for the health department after board members failed to approve nearly $190,000 in spending and workforce cuts.

The health board decided to table its finance committee's proposed cost-savings and reduction in workforce plans after spending an hour and a half in closed session at the board's Feb. 15 meeting.

"Because of other things that came up back there and have come to light, the board has decided to table until the finance committee can reconvene," health board Chairman Harold Todd said after coming out of closed session.

According to Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway, former health director Brandon Hurley's resignation as public health director freed about $35,000-45,000 in salary and fringe benefits, funds that may now prevent a potential staff layoff.

"With the resignation of Brandon Hurley, that freed up some money," Conway said. "We'll have another meeting with the finance committee about the cost-savings plan, and maybe keep some people employed."

Todd said the finance committee had met at least four times to create a plan that offered the most savings with the least impact on employees, a proposal that would not force the health board to spend its reserves or raise taxes.

In order to balance its budget for the current fiscal year, The Anderson News reported, the health board chose to spend $160,000 of its reserve funds.

The finance committee's workforce reduction plan, which met the approval of state health officials, included more than $154,000 in eliminated and significantly reduced employee hours, with one employee expected to be laid off.

The committee's proposed savings plan included another $30,000 decrease in operating expenses such as travel, advertising and supplies.

"We did not take this casually," Todd, a member of the board's finance committee, said, "it was not a perfunctory review of the information."

Board members Joy Hoskins and Dr. Mark Tussey, however, expressed concerns about the finance committee's proposed spending cuts, specifically a

Wright assists school nurses

Tim Wright, interim public health director, has re-allocated about 10-15 hours of data entry to a health department staff member in order to ease the burden of district data entry on school nurses.

"There's been a big issue over the services that the school nurses provide," Wright said. "We have been entering those services to collect Medicaid money. Those entries are backed up; it's an extra duty that we attack when we can."

Wright said he believes getting caught up on data entry will allow for the health department to collect more revenue from Medicaid for the services it provides to Anderson County students.

Currently, the health department reimburses the state about 30 cents for every dollar it claims through Medicaid billing.

$4,000 reduction in the female contraception budget.

Tussey, who described the department's contraception services as his "pet project," said he views the health department as an avenue for many teenagers in Anderson County and offering contraception is a vital service for the health department.

"Doing away with that service causes me heartburn," he said.

Hoskins agreed, saying she was vehemently opposed to any reduction in contraception.

"I think the young women of Anderson County would agree with [Tussey]," she said.

As of Dec. 31, nursing supervisor Renee Durr said during the meeting, the health department had spent half of its $12,000 contraception budget for this fiscal year.

Tussey asked Todd if the finance committee's cuts, once approved, could be "tweaked, or was it set in stone?"

"If the situation does improve, we can come back and certainly amend," Todd said.

Conway made the first motion to approve the finance committee's spending plan for the health department, with Dr. Aaron Goodpaster giving the second.

Before it could be put to a vote, however, Hoskins asked for the board to go into closed session to discuss the reduction in workforce plan.

"I don't feel comfortable talking about this plan unless we go into closed session," Hoskins said.

"We can do it generically based on the total," Todd said, explaining that the board could vote on the total payroll cuts with individual reductions being further discussed one-on-one with the interim health director.

Conway and Goodpaster withdrew their motions for approving the spending cuts in order for the board to go into closed session, with one caveat from Conway, who asked that the board's closed session discussion be limited.

"We have spent hours upon hours working on this cost-savings plan," Conway said. "We had to do what we had to do to keep the health department in operation. I know there's ill feelings; I'm sorry for that."

Conway later said in a follow-up interview that he agreed with the board's decision to table the finance committee's proposed cost-savings plan, now that money is available to possibly prevent a permanent staff member layoff.

Todd said the finance committee plans to work with the new interim director to "tweak" its current savings and reduction in workforce plan. As of Tuesday afternoon, the finance committee had not scheduled a date to discuss changes to its savings plans.

Board names Tim Wright as interim health director

The health board approved Tim Wright, current health department environmentalist director, to fill the interim public health director position beginning Feb. 16.

Hoskins was the sole board member to vote against selecting Wright, with new board of health member Mark Litkenhus abstaining.

Wright will continue to perform his duties as environmentalist director as well as public health director for a term of 180 days.

health director on Feb. 16.

Wright, who has 21 years of experience as a health department environmental director, said he plans on working closely with the board of health to achieve his three goals: provide the best service for the community, take care of health department employees and gain enough revenue to get the budget back in the black.

"Goal Three is self-explanatory: get in the black," Wright said.

As interim director, Wright faces an $187,000 health department deficit, including staff furlough days and a potential staff member layoff.

Now that the health board's finance committee will be taking a second look at its proposed spending cuts and reduction in workforce plan, Wright said he has been asked to discuss his own findings on how to save the department money at the next committee meeting.

"I have viewed the finance committee's recommendation; they have a good plan to save money," Wright said. "We've got a base to work from."

He said workforce reductions will most likely include furlough days — with some positions being cut from full-time to part-time — but he will try to prevent any layoffs.

"I will do everything I can to keep from laying off anyone," Wright said. "I don't want to lose any of them."

Other cuts include a budgeted $9,500 in advertising and recruitment and $17,528 in program and supplies, as well as looking at utilities savings in heating and cooling the health department building.

Meet Tim Wright, interim health director

Tim Wright has been in Anderson County for nine years as the environmental director. He is a graduate of Knox Central High School in Barbourville, a graduate of Cumberland College in Williamsburg with a bachelor of science in environmental health and a bachelor of science in physical education. After working at Powell County health department since 1992, Wright transferred to Anderson County as environmental director in August 2003.

As for the contraception budget, Wright said he and nursing supervisor Renee Durr will be looking into how many and what types of contraception the department has to provide, and whether or not generic products can be offered as replacements for more expensive brands.

"It is a combination of things that has got us in the red," Wright said. "Through the finance committee's work and my looking into their recommendation, my goal is to get in the black as soon as possible."

Wright will serve as interim health director for 180 days. At the end of that period, the health board will reconvene and determine whether to extend Wright's position for a full year's term, or to advertise for a new, part-time health director.

Wright said he plans to outline a more specific plan for the health department during the first official staff meeting on March 6.

"I have no doubt in my mind that he can do the job, I have the utmost faith in Tim Wright," Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway said. "He's a plain spoken man, he is a person you can go in and sit down and talk to about the problems that you have and try to work them out. He knows what needs to be done and what does not need to be done."

For Wright, the important thing is to get people in the door to utilize the health department building and its services, or risk having to raise the health tax.

"We have to make the public know of the services we provide and we have to let them know they are welcome," Wright said. "They are crucial to our survival."

according to the National Conference of State Legislatures.

At least four Kentucky counties — Anderson, Whitley, Corbin and Laurel — have passed county ordinances banning synthetic marijuana, often referred to as "potpourri."

The Drug Enforcement Administration has reported on the negative long-term health effects of synthetic marijuana, including anxiety, psychotic episodes, vomiting, seizures, hallucinations and non-responsiveness.

During the fiscal court's January public hearing regarding the potential ban of fake pot, Vaughn, as well as about a dozen supporters, spoke in defense of keeping both synthetic marijuana and bath salts legal in Anderson County.

"There are bigger epidemics right now than potpourri," Vaughn said during the fiscal court's forum, referring to synthetic marijuana's marketing.

"If you're really concerned, you'd place a ban on tobacco, which kills 90 percent of its users."

The Anderson News reported that sources said Vaughn pleaded guilty to drug and receiving stolen property charges in Franklin County in 2009.

He is also facing charges in Franklin County for trafficking a controlled substance within 1,000 yards of a school.

Joys of fatherhood know no boundaries

While hiding in the hallway, I listened as the commander retold the story I told him a few hours earlier. It was the story of how my daughter, Hayley, had gone from aspiring college student bent on becoming a physical therapist to landing in that career field with the Air Force. The catch, though, required her to report to boot camp three days later, leaving her parents almost no time to come to grips with the fact that their middle child was leaving the nest. The commander knew I was listening in the hallway. Hayley didn't have a clue. It was Friday, and I had just flown into Rapid City, SD, where Hayley is stationed at Ellsworth Air Force Base.

Ben Carlson
General manager

She phoned home a few weeks earlier, giddily telling me that she had won her unit's airman of the year award. After hearing the news and deciding to make the trip just days before leaving, I worked the phones until I got through to Hayley's first sergeant, who passed me off to her section supervisor.

I told him I was heading that way, and asked if it were possible for me to be present when her commander gave her the award.

Now, I've seen plenty in my nearly five decades on this planet. But if I live five decades more, I doubt I will ever see such a combination of shock, disbelief and overwhelming joy on a person's face as I saw at that moment on my daughter's.

He said he would check and get back to me. When he did, he, the commander and the first sergeant had hatched a plan to allow me not only to attend, but also actually hand her the award.

Here's how it worked: Once I arrived Thursday night, I was spirited directly into the base's version of a Motel 6 and sequestered until the ceremony.

Ellsworth, a B1 Bomber base smack dab in the middle of the endless prairie between South Dakota's Black Hills and Badlands, isn't particularly big and the odds were just too great that Hayley might spot me were I to wander around outside.

On Friday morning, the section supervisor, commander and I held a very clandestine meeting to go over the details of the ceremony, including how they planned to get me there at just the right time.

At exactly 1515 hours (that's 3:15 p.m. to us civilians), the first sergeant pulled up to my quarters and drove me to the ceremony.

When we arrived, she hustled me into her office and waited until the commander walked by, stuck his head in the door and nodded that the ceremony was about to begin.

Moments later, I stood in the hallway listening as he recounted some of her accomplishments that led to the award, along with the story I had told him earlier that day.

Although it took only a couple of minutes, my mind raced through years of memories of Hayley, an indefatigable optimist who never met a stray puppy — human or canine — she didn't want to bring home, a trait directly traceable to her mom.

There were memories of joyous reunions after I returned from months away from home in search of better jobs, and harrowing ones such as the time toddler-aged Hayley gulped a mouthful of liquid furniture polish and I was certain she was going to die.

My woolgathering was cut short, though, when I heard my cue from the commander.

"Airman Carlson," he said, "I'm not going to present this award to you today. Instead, there is someone here who I'd like to present it for me."

At that, the first sergeant motioned me into the room.

Now, I've seen plenty in my nearly five decades on this planet. But if I live five decades more, I doubt I will ever see such a combination of shock, disbelief and overwhelming joy on a person's face as I saw at that moment on my daughter's.

Both of us fought back the inevitable tears — she in a game attempt to maintain her military bearing in front of her entire unit, me to be able to read a citation from the Kentucky House of Representatives, courtesy of state Rep. Kim King.

We both failed, but it didn't matter because when I looked out at the crowd there was barely a dry eye in the room.

There are no boundaries that can contain a father's love, nor any that limit his children's ability to prove that truism, regardless of distance or years.

For that, and this past weekend's remarkable memories, I will be eternally grateful.

Swallowed by education's complicated alphabet soup

My favorite writers — journalists, poets and songwriters alike — tell it like it is.

No careful waltzes around the truth.

No ring-around-the-rosy games around what really matters.

Which is why the convoluted language of education, especially the dizzyingly complicated formulas of Kentucky's new educational assessment standards, is particularly frustrating.

The main and justified criticism of No Child Left Behind legislation was that its standards for school improvement were unrealistic and complicated.

I'm concerned, however, that Kentucky may have jumped out of NCLB's frying pan into a fiery alphabet soup of manipulated formulas.

"Education-ese" is not a new method of communication, as I'm sure those familiar with the Department of Education know.

It's much like every bureaucracy that feels the need to invent a more pleasant sounding phrase instead of a much more direct word.

"Letting go" is to "fired" as "Student Growth Percentile" is to "super complicated formula only the almighty state education department knows how to calculate."

I'm not generally opposed to using mathematical formulas. Formulas determine how much interest I owe for my student loans and how much I need to set aside in my bank account to pay them off.

And for the most part, components of the mathematically inclined assessment model make sense.

Rather than putting pressure on one subgroup to perform at an impossible 100 percent, Kentucky's new system calculates one goal based on many measurements, from achievement to college readiness to graduation rate.

Eventually, program reviews for curriculum as well as per-

Nothing normal about this winter season

Mark your calendars. The Heirloom Seed Workshop will be held at 10 a.m. on March 24 at the public library's large meeting room.

Pre-registration is required (to make sure everyone gets a chair). You can call the library at 839-6420 or stop in to register. It is a free workshop.

A second mini-workshop called Fast Food will be held the same day at 1 p.m. in the same room. From Plant to Plate in six weeks, is the basic outline for the class, and I'm really looking forward to it. You do not need to register for that one. Now, we all know that this has been an unusual winter. I'm not complaining. I did look back to my December column of Mother Nature's predictions. The August fogs counted to five, not four, so we have one more snow if it turns out to be accurate again.

The fur on horses and rabbits were thicker than normal. The leaves hung on longer than normal and the persimmon seed showed a spoon. All signs of a cold and snowy winter.

The Arctic Oscillation just blew that all out of whack, because it stayed up north.

Cheryl Steenerson
Columnist

Maybe it's the long range part of Mother Nature's signs that are so iffy. So, let's look at the here and now signs, for a little gardening help. Since, we're all getting anxious to get out in the dirt.

When the skies are cloudless and the temperature is falling, chances are it will frost, so protect the plants. Clouds act like a blanket that prevents the heat from escaping into the atmosphere. Clouds help keep frost from settling on your plants.

A night breeze can also keep plants warm. Heat from the day rises from the ground as night falls. A breeze helps mix the warm air with the cold, protecting plants. So, placement of plants or gardens around your landscape makes a difference in how much heat they will get at night.

Cold air is heavier than hot air, so it sinks. It collects in valleys and depressions creating frost pockets. A slope, however, will benefit from the gentle breezes. A slope with trees on it will provide even warmer air to flow down to your depressions. It's the moisture given off by the leaves on the trees that warms the air.

Slopes that face south benefit from longer exposure to the sun. They hold the heat longer and end up providing the best areas for frost protection. A garden at the base of a south facing slope will offer a longer growing season.

Mature trees on three sides of the garden will extend the season as well. The trees help to trap heat radiating off the soil, and they will also add moisture into the air, raising the dew point and reducing the chances for frost.

As the evening air cools, moisture collects on the ground in the form of dew. Dew releases heat. So, if you're wondering if it will frost, check out the humidity. The more moisture at sunset, the less likelihood that it will frost.

I tell you all this so that you will be prepared with protection on hand for the coming gardening season. Watering the soil can protect plants from frost. Sheets or cloth can provide protection for new plants from frost, since they serve as a blanket. I use water jugs, with the bottoms sliced off, to create little houses, called clutches, for little plants' protection.

Now, get in gear. If you don't want to bother with protection, our last frost date is usually around tax day, April 15. You can usually plant outside after that date. Then again, there hasn't been anything "usual" about this winter season. Spring may prove to be just as weird. My advice, be prepared for anything. Happy growing.

Support the children of military personnel April 28

Anderson County residents include at least 70 children who are military dependents from all branches of the military.

Frequent deployments have become a way of life in the past 10 years. Returning home is not necessarily easy for the families or military personnel.

Community members can help military families by understanding that no one reacts the same to coming home. Rejoice together at reunions and give families time and space to reintegrate.

Each family member will have different expectations about being together after a long deployment. Some of the ideas here came from Facts for Families published by the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry and from "When a Deployed Parent Returns Home" from the Military Families Learning Network.

Understanding deployment and reintegration from the child's point of view is important to helping reduce stress for the child. Even though children are very happy to see their parent after many months away, the difficulties associated with deployment are not over and may continue well after the deployed parent is back at home. Over 30 percent of children still experience high levels of anxiety and stress once the deployed parent returns home.

Initially the excitement of the reunion is stressful for children. Children may be anxious and uncertain about the reunion. Developmental stages affect the child's response. Toddlers may not remember the parent well and act shy or strange around them. School age children may not understand the returning parent's need to take care of themselves and to spend time with their spouse. Children may need a period of time to warm up and readjust to the returning parent. This shouldn't be taken personally or misinterpreted.

Extended family members also may need to readjust their role in the family. If they have provided extra support and service to the family during deployment, they may have difficulty redefining their role with the family.

Family problems that existed before the deployment frequently reappear after the reunion. The spouse at home and the returning family member may both expect extra attention and support from the other spouse. Both may want recognition for the contribution they have made to the family during the deployment. Patience, understanding and the ability to talk about feelings and shared responsibilities will help the family cope.

What can you do to help? If you are a family member, give everyone time to adjust to the changes that accompany returning military parents/spouses. Life goes on at home and all family members experience changes. Give it time and make the effort to form a healthy, new life together.

If you are part of the extended family, then likewise give the family time to adjust. Be a good listener and be non-judgmental. Problems and challenges will develop. Trust that the adults will be able to resolve issues.

If significant problems develop, the family will benefit from help from a qualified mental health professional.

Kentucky Military Child Appreciation Day will be on April 28 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the American Legion Post 34 in Lawrenceburg. All dependents from all branches of the military are invited. The Kentucky National Guard is sponsoring the event along with many statewide sponsors and local groups.

percent, Kentucky's new system calculates one goal based on many measurements, from achievement to college readiness to graduation rate.

Eventually, program reviews for curriculum as well as performance reviews for our educators and administrators will be a part of a school's overall score.

One goal, one scale. Seems simple enough.

But when even our local educators, well versed in the job of explaining the alphabet soup to reporters like myself, don't fully understand how the state comes up with these calculations, there's cause for some worry.

Here's a little excerpt on how the Kentucky Department of Education plans on addressing individual gap group scores: "All schools with gap groups underperforming in the third standard deviation (commonly called 3 Sigma) will face state consequences ... The Kentucky Department of Education will use the 3 Sigma model to eliminate the masking of low-scoring groups and will conduct ongoing data analysis to determine if the model needs adjusting."

What's 3 Sigma you ask? Good question.

Dust off your statistics textbook, because you're going to have to recall what standard deviation, or "the average distance each score is from the average" is to figure it out.

And don't expect KDE to offer helpful hints or easy-to-read charts; you'll have to do the mathematical detective work yourself.

Back in the fall, I wrote a column about the concept of measuring education. How removing NCLB wasn't going to fix all of Kentucky's problems when it came to getting our students to improve, and ultimately, excel.

Well, I have a solution for the Department of Education to adopt in its spare time.

Keep it simple, stupid.

Or, at the very least, show your work.

It's not as though I don't like wading through pages of jargon.

I don't mind putting together the puzzle pieces to make up the whole of what the future of Kentucky education will look like.

And to be honest, once I dug deep into the math and re-familiarized myself with statistics and the empirical rule, the assessment formula made more sense.

Not every educator, parent and administrator has the time to take a crash course in Education Math 101, but all those who will be affected by the state formula have a right to understand how KDE arrived at its answer.

Make no mistake: the "Unbridled Learning Accountability Model" isn't as free from NCLB's complicated reins as its name suggests.

Police report drugs, speed as factors in Spencer double fatality

By Mallory Bilger
Landmark News Service

New information released by Kentucky State Police last Thursday brought little comfort but offers some insight on what might have caused the tragic double-fatality that claimed the lives of Spencer County High School juniors Michaela "Mikie" Monroe and Shelby Bocking.

But that information has not changed the love and support that the victims' friends and families have for the girls. "I do not believe that I have to defend my daughter to this community who knew her, as well as Shelby, very well," said Monroe's father, Paul Monroe, in a written statement to The Spencer Magnet. "They were two innocent young ladies who fell into the trappings of media hype."

According to a KSP news release, 16-year-old Monroe was operating the 1990 Ford F-350 involved in the crash on Mike Brown Road Jan. 18. State police reported that the accident occurred around 3:20 p.m. when Monroe was traveling east on Mike Brown Road toward Ky. 1633, also known as Elk Creek Road. According to an earlier police report, the driver lost control and the vehicle overturned. Monroe and Bocking, 17, were ejected from the vehicle and pronounced dead at the scene. A third girl, 16-year-old SCHS student Jenna Rigsby, was also in the vehicle. She sustained injuries and was transported by the Air Methods helicopter to a Louisville hospital, but was later released.

State police identified four contributing factors after a review of physical evidence, witness statements and toxicology results. The following factors were taken verbatim from the KSP release:

- Seat belt use: None of the passengers in the vehicle were wearing seat belts which contributed to the fact that Michaela D. Monroe and Shelby Bocking were ejected from the vehicle and sustained fatal injuries.

- Speed: It has been determined that Michaela D. Monroe was operating the 1990 Ford F-350 at a minimum speed of between 48 and 56 mph.

- DUI: It has been determined that Michaela D. Monroe was operating the 1990 Ford F-350 while under the influence of drugs, specifically Benzodiazepines and marijuana.

- Intermediate licensing violations: At the time of the collision Michaela D. Monroe only possessed an intermediate license, which restricted her from driving with more than one unrelated passenger in the vehicle. She was not related to either passenger.

The news release expanded on the above details, noting that the accident occurred as Monroe approached a curve that had a critical speed of 35 mph. According to the release, she was unable to negotiate the curve.

The state police also gave the following insight into the crash: "Just prior to the crash, the operator and passengers in the vehicle were smoking marijuana. Toxicology results revealed that the operator was also under the influence of prescription medication which she was not prescribed and also under the influence of marijuana."

KSP Trooper Hunter Martin told The Spencer Magnet Tuesday that he could not elaborate on the above statement, noting the pending investigation. He said he could not comment on the estimated time that the marijuana was used.

"Basically all I can tell you about is what our investigation revealed," he said. "I cannot go into details about it right now. The case is still open. We are still following up on a few things about the case. I cannot jeopardize that."

None of the four contributing factors was labeled as more influential than the other. Monroe said he felt the victims' reputations have been unnecessarily questioned because of the state police report.

"We believe they were falsely accused in many areas," Monroe wrote. "My daughter worked many hours with other children on youth hunts and also tutored children in grade school every Friday. She is truly a blessed child and loved by all who knew her positive attitude, her outgoing personality and her heart for life. She lived it to the fullest. My daughter may not have been perfect in all ways, but no one on this earth is. She was 16 years old, full of life and vigor, and never meant harm to anyone."

Bocking's mother, Tammy Bocking, was contacted for this story. She declined comment, stating that the police investigation was not complete and she had been advised not to speak to the media. She did, however, defend her daughter's character, saying, "She was an angel, she was a saint."

Support for the girls and passion for the Buckle Up Spencer County initiative continues to be strong. Little Mount resident Kristin Young, who founded the Buckle Up initiative, told The Spencer Magnet via Facebook message that her devotion to save lives and inform the public has only grown stronger.

"I want to be very clear about something," Young said. "I have received emails and private messages regarding the new details regarding the crash that took Mikie and Shelby."

"Yes, they made some bad decisions. They were teenagers and sadly that will happen in one degree or another. Even worse, these decisions cost them the heaviest price — their lives. With that said, this does not waiver my or many others' devotion to the mission of seat belt safety. These girls are loved and they made a mistake — one I hope we can all learn from. Their mistakes are not uncommon in today's society — but their cost to them, their families and this community was great. I hope this news will not weaken your devotion, but rather strengthen it."

Martin said state police has recently received some new information regarding the crash, and he expects the investigation to be open for several more weeks.

"We are still waiting on some official reports from the medical examiner's office. We got some new information that we're following up on. It won't be closed until we're satisfied," Martin said.

Monroe maintained his position that the information released to the media is incorrect.

"We pray our friends and loved ones and all others who knew our daughter will look over these shameful remarks by the media and remember these daughters who were beautiful in all aspects of life," he wrote.

"We cannot believe the media and other people would want to justify themselves as accurate through our families grief and sorrow that we feel by this tragedy."

Band of Brothers works to send care packages to Afghanistan

By Meaghan Downs
Staff writer

Football season is over, but the Band of Brothers, as a service organization, isn't finished when it comes to helping out its community.

The Band of Brothers collected garbage for five hours along five miles of US 62 on Jan. 29, receiving $100 per mile through a county grant.

Now the group will use the $500 they earned to send care packages to U.S. soldiers serving in Afghanistan.

Mike Fitzpatrick, one of the area coordinators for the Band of Brothers, said the group will put the care packages together on March 4 at the Anderson Extension office, located in the county park.

Fitzpatrick said his son-in-law Chad Fyffe, who just returned home from Afghanistan, plans to help in getting a list together of what kinds of items soldiers overseas really need and want.

"They're getting a lot of care packages, but it's the same old stuff," Fitzpatrick said.

He said he expects the Band of Brothers to expand, with each current member recruiting juniors and student body members for next year.

"The community service thing, we want this to be a lifelong experience for them," Fitzpatrick said.

The Band of Brothers is looking for anyone who would like to help with the care packages, either through donations, matching funds or by volunteering time.

For more information, contact Mike Fitzpatrick at 502-803-5499 or via e-mail at mikefitz2323@gmail.com.

New Liberty celebrated 100th anniversary

In going back over Mr. Shely's columns in the four or five papers it took to run his places in Anderson County information, one was inadvertently left out. The columns ran in 1972.

Shely was a teacher and resident historian.

JOHNSONVILLE — Located 18 miles west of Lawrenceburg on U.S. 62. It was named for the first settler, David Johnson, who built a log house there about 1835. A post office was started in 1854 and the community was incorporated in 1856.

50 YEARS AGO Feb. 22, 1962

New Liberty Christian Church celebrated its 100th anniversary with special all-day services.

Guest speakers were to include the Bro. Raymond Sparrow, who until recently was the minister of the Briar Ridge Christian Church; and Bro. Ezra Sparrow of Lawrenceburg.

The New Liberty Congregation was founded by the Rev. Henry Sparrow on Feb. 25, 1862 in a one room log building near the present community of Johnsonville and originally known as Sparrow's Union Church.

It was not long, however, until property was purchased on the New Liberty Road and the first church was built on its present site.

In 1937, a third building was erected. No major improvements had been made on that structure until December 1961, when construction was begun on a $6,500 educational unit under the building. The new basement was finished on Feb. 20, 1962.

Both Raymond and Ezra Sparrow were direct descendants of the founder of the church, Henry Sparrow. Other ministers who were also descendants of the founder of the church were George Burge and J.S. Whitehouse, ministers of Christian Churches; O.T. Sparrow, Coleman Sparrow, Elmer Sparrow, ministers of Christian Churches and David Sparrow, a Baptist minister.

Billie Ann Driskell was chosen winner of the 1962 contest for the selection of the American Homemaker of Tomorrow conducted by General Mills.

Miss Driskell was a student at Western High School. She was eligible for one of the 102 scholarships to be given away.

4-H Club meets at Ward

The Brainpoppers 4-H Club met Feb. 7 at Emma B. Ward. The meeting was called to order by the club president Olivia Rader. The American pledge was led by Jalen Newton, and the 4-H pledge was led by Kortney Roberts. We answered roll call by jumping out of your chair. The club secretary, Hunter Rutherford, read the minutes from our last meeting. Mrs. Gill told the club about the shooting club meeting on the 20th for those interested. Our program for the day was titled "Weather watchers and warnings and what would happen during a storm for shelter."

The vice president of our club, Eli Drury, had the following people help with presenting the program: Jada Young, Jalen Newton, Kara Cundiff, Caleb Stratton, Ruby Campbell, Olivia Rader and Colin Spencer. We learned about what you should do when a tornado has come and shelter. After our program, our recreation leaders, Jada Young and Jalen Newton, led us in a game called "This is my nose." A motion was made by Bobby Beasley to adjourn the meeting and was seconded by Marissa Herrington. Our next meeting will be March 6.

From staff reports

Ryan Alves of Lawrenceburg presented research on the future of Kentucky media at Eastern Kentucky University's annual Posters-at-the-Capitol event in Frankfort.

Alves, Whitney Leggett of Winchester, and Lindsay Huffman of Park City, mentored by Deborah Givens of ECU's faculty, titled their poster "The Future of Kentucky Media: The 2011 ECU Community Journalism Project."

An excerpt from their abstract for the presentation follows: "As online media grows and the recession forces companies to downsize, many journalism students are worried about the future of print media and its role in the community. Each year, the Eastern Kentucky University Community Journalism class conducts a research project pertaining to an aspect about media in communities in the university's service region. The 2011 class decided to capitalize on the discussion about the importance of local media and investigate partnerships between local newspapers and high schools in Eastern's 22-county service region."

The statewide event is designed to celebrate the research, scholarly and creative accomplishments of undergraduates at Kentucky's public universities and provide legislators with an opportunity to bet-

God doesn't care who comes in first

Nowadays, all you hear and see on television is something related to politics. It's an important topic indeed.

So many yearn for the top spot of honor in our culture today. The whole idea of being popular and prestigious is appealing to most of us.

However, the Bible tells us a lot about what God wants of us, and how being the most popular or being on top is of little value to God. Ecclesiastes was written by Solomon, who had all of the money, power and possessions a man could want.

His take on high positions of man and being the most popular come alive in scripture titled "Advancement is Meaningless."

You may need to read and reread the following as it is a tad bit confusing (at least it was to me) until you really dive into exactly what Solomon was getting at.

Ecc 4:13-16: "Better a poor but wise youth than an old but foolish king who no longer knows how to heed a warning.

"The youth may have come from prison to the kingship, or he may have been born in poverty within his kingdom. I saw that all who lived "and walked under the sun followed the youth, the king's successor.

"There was no end to all the people who were before them. But those who came later were not pleased with the successor. This too is meaningless, a chasing after the wind."

I think this scripture basically reminds us that seeking God's approval in our lives is really all that matters. Why is America one of the only countries on earth where Christianity is actually declining?

We glamorize celebrities and almost worship them and the way they live when God's word tells us the least will be first in his kingdom.

American's attempt to create heaven here on earth is inherently flawed concerning our eternal salvation.

We try so hard to impress others and be the most liked (especially politicians), yet in the end we will answer to God, whose opinion really is all that counts!

do to improve their communities."

During the dead of winter several were traveling on a train during one of the worst snow storms. Among the passengers was a young mother and her child. This woman was very nervous as she watched the storm from her window seat, and she constantly asked the conductor to make sure she got off at her stop. The conductor assured her that he would take care of her and her baby.

There was another passenger who noticed that the young mother was nervous and said, "Don't worry, I know this route well and will see to it that you get off at your stop. The train came to a stop and the other passenger told the young woman that the conductor must have forgotten because this was her stop. He assisted the young women off the train and set back feeling great about his good deed. Later the conductor came in and asked, "Where is the young woman?" The man said, "You must have gotten busy, so I helped her off at the last stop." The conductor said, "Man that was not her stop you just put her off in the middle of the wilderness." They backed the train up and they finally found the young woman frozen to death with her little baby dead in her arms. This woman was the victim of good intentions.

Don't be a victim of wrong information; it might just cost you your soul. Make sure you do your own Bible searching, because some are filled with good intentions. Read Acts 17:11 and Galatians 1:8-9.

Lady Bearcats get special opportunity next week

Taking regional title on home court is rare

If there is anything more rare in high school basketball than winning a regional championship, it has to be taking a title on your home court.

That seems rather strange. But it's true. In the last 15 years, it has happened just twice in the Eighth Region, both times on the girls' side - 1998 with South Oldham and 2004 with Bullitt East. Since Henry County started hosting the boys' tournament annually in 1963, that school has not come close to a Sweet 16 berth.

Several factors have to come together to make it happen and all of them should be meshing when the girls' regional tournament tips off Monday night at Anderson County High School. The pairings and times will be set at the regional meetings this weekend.

But for Anderson County, at least, one of the big factors in its favor came into play more than five years ago. That is when the school was awarded a regional tournament for the first time.

That coincided with a makeover of the school's gym that added locker rooms and some other amenities that made it possible for the school to host a girls' regional tournament.

Little did anyone know at the time that Anderson's girls would be ranked in the state's Top 10 heading into this year's tourney.

Let me interject that I am writing this well before the Lady Bearcats were to have played Spencer County in the 30th District semi-final on Tuesday. The winner of that game advances to the region and suffice it to say that the chances of Anderson falling were beyond slim.

And I need to back up a bit too. Anderson is also hosting the 30th District Tournament this year, meaning the finals are set for Friday night. The Bearcat boys' team was to have also played Spencer County on Tuesday night. That one figured to be a tight one and while I picked the Bearcats to win, an outcome either way would not have surprised me. Because of that, I am not saying much about the boys' tournament, per se.

But what I do know is that whether it is boys' basketball or the girls' game, the crowd makes a difference. Teams feed off the energy. They see the home crowd in familiar surroundings and it is an advantage.

The Anderson girls can have the rare opportunity to not leave their home court on their way to a regional title. You have to figure that Anderson won't host again for at least 12 years, or when the current crop of kindergartners has made it to their senior year.

In other words, Anderson's girls have a huge advantage next week. Call it luck, if you want, but it is a time for the Lady Bearcats to take that advantage.

You also have to be very good, just like Anderson is. The Lady Bearcats started the season ranked in the state's Top 10, have been in and out since then as they weathered a rugged schedule and what could have been a devastating injury to point guard Destiny Stewart. Instead, they look to be hitting their stride at the right time.

But they can use every advantage they can get.

The home court in itself is one. Even though the baskets are 10 feet high, background, lighting and other nuances are different on every court. Playing at home gives a certain routine as well.

And the crowd can be a factor. I saw it last year when Walton-Vernona, playing about 15 miles from home at Gallatin County, fed off the huge partisan crowd in the regional final.

This year, though the ball really is in Anderson's court, both in the district finals, which figure to be against a dangerous Collins team, and in the regional tournament.

And the Lady Bearcat fans really can make a difference for them.

LEXINGTON - With the state high school wrestling tournament moving to the Kentucky Horse Park this year, it might be fitting to say that Anderson County simply did not get out of the gate well.

With high hopes and 10 wrestlers qualifying for the tournament, the Bearcats suffered a difficult first round in which seven of those 10 went down to defeat. But one of the other three, 220-pounder Chris Fitzpatrick, advanced all the way to the medal round before stalling. He finished eighth in the tournament, only the second Mat Cat to be honored at the finals in the last four years.

As a team, the Bearcats finished with 32.50 points, good for 27th out of 97 teams represented. Campbell County outlasted Union County, the 2010 champ, for the team title.

It was, however, Anderson's best team finish since 2006 when the Mat Cats had three medalists and finished 19th at the tournament.

Fitzpatrick advanced to the medal round with impressive wins on Friday, including a 4-3 win over Brandon Roeder of Louisville Western. Roeder had beaten Fitzpatrick earlier in the season. But in the quarterfinal round, Campbell County's Austin Myers, the eventual state champ, ended Fitzpatrick's state championship dream with a 15-5 decision.

"It's an honor to place at the state tournament, but knowing of a couple of guys ahead of me that I have beaten in the past and others I could (have beaten), I lost to because of mistakes during the match, finishing how I did is a disappointment.

Scintillating finish makes super Senior Night

Ruggles 3, Carmichael 'D' lift Bearcats past Franklin

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

You can take all the old sports clichés about a one-point thriller, tie them up, roll them all together as one and still not describe Anderson County's win over Franklin County Friday night.

The will to win. Refuse to lose. Anything can happen in a rivalry game. Senior Night is special.

They were all true as the Bearcats scored the last six points to get their first win over their northern neighbors since 2008.

But they cannot capture the sheer joy that descended on Glen Drury Court after Spencer Ruggles and Seth Carmichael teamed up for the eventual game winning 3-point shot. Ruggles did the honors with Carmichael alertly grabbing the rebound of a missed free throw, then fired a pass to the wide open Ruggles on the left wing. His shot went through with 9.4 seconds to go.

"I didn't know if it was going in when I shot it," Ruggles said. "I didn't really think about it. I just went up and was confident in my shot."

"The ball got tipped around, so I grabbed it," Carmichael said of his rebound. "Spencer came up with the big shot."

After a Franklin time out with 5.6 seconds to play, it was Carmichael who got the job of slowing Franklin's Ryan Timmons, who everyone in the building - and probably a few outside - knew was going to get the call from the Flyers. This time, it was Ruggles

Lady Bearcats roar, rout Franklin County

Brown shines on Senior Night

No one can know how many people have taken notice, but Anderson County has been giving all indications that it has every intention of defending its home court in the post-season.

The Lady Bearcats won their seventh straight game, and 13th out of 14, in a dominating performance against visiting Franklin County Friday night.

Anderson, which is hosting the 30th District Tournament this week and will be playing the Eighth Region Tournament at home for the first time next week, routed Franklin, 67-26, the second-largest victory margin of the year for the Lady Bearcats and the largest at home.

And while an injury-riddled Franklin team went down to defeat for the ninth time in 11 games, it was still a team that had been competitive despite not being at full-strength. Franklin lost Samford-signee Ashli

Mayes early in the year and was without another starter, guard Brittany Mello, Friday night.

Their presence would have undoubtedly made the game closer, but the Lady Bearcats were clicking on all cylinders.

"I thought we played extremely well," Anderson coach Tony Kays said. "I have been preaching all year we have to have great defense in the half court. It was outstanding tonight. I believe the kids are buying in."

Friday, Anderson had effectively taken care of business by the time the first quarter was over. By that time, Anderson led 17-4 and Franklin never got closer. Anderson improved to 22-5 while Franklin finished

EIGHTH REGION TOURNEY BRIEFS

Regional draws this weekend

The Eighth Region tournaments get underway next week with the girls' tournament tipping off Monday, Feb. 27 at Anderson County High School. It will be the first time Anderson has ever hosted a basketball regional. The boys' tournament will get underway on Wednesday, Feb. 29 at Henry County, where the tournament has been held every year since 1963. Pairings for the tournament will be set at the regional meetings over the weekend. Pairings will be posted online at www.theandersonnews.com as soon as they are available.

Eighth Region boys tourney offers fan shuttle

Henry County Public Schools will offer a shuttle bus service during the boys' Eighth Region Basketball Tournament, scheduled to begin Wednesday, Feb. 29. Attendees may park at New Castle Elementary School or at the Henry County Board of Education office, and catch a bus to the Henry County High School gym starting at 6 p.m. each game day. Buses will run approximately every 15 minutes and will continue until 45 minutes after the last game.

Director of Transportation Kevin Whitt said those who catch the shuttle at the Board of Education office will park behind the board building, and walk to the end of the drive. At New Castle Elementary, shuttle riders can park anywhere, and catch the bus in the bus lane, on the north side of the school.

"I know a lot of people will still park on the side of the road," near the high school, Whitt said, but added that this was an safer option the school system wanted to offer.

The Henry County Board of Education is located at 326 S. Main St., in New Castle.

New Castle Elementary School is located at 182 S. Property Rd., also in New Castle.

New or improving fishing opportunities

By Lee McClellan

Ky. Dept. of Fish and Wildlife Resources

It is almost time to renew your annual fishing license. The new license year begins March 1.

This coming year presents some new opportunities to catch rainbow trout, blue catfish, redear sunfish, also known as shellcrackers, and white crappie.

Black crappie now dominate the population in Taylorsville Lake, and a good spawn last year should lead to good fishing for blacks in the coming years. Also, three years of white crappie stockings should lead to great fishing this spring.

White crappie stockings will continue at Taylorsville Lake and Kentucky Lake this year as well as eastern Kentucky's Carr Creek and Paintsville lakes.

Anglers report catching keeper black crappie by walking the bank near the Settler's Trace access and casting Roadrunners and lime-green curly-tailed grubs at stickups and flooded timber.

Yatesville Lake has excellent bluegill numbers while Fishtrap Lake holds trophy bluegill in the 11- to 12-inch range.

Louisville area anglers will soon have new winter and early spring trout fishing with excellent public access at a stream close to town. The fisheries division plans to stock a total of 7,500 rainbow trout in March, April and October of this year in Floyd's Fork of Salt River. Miles Park off U.S.

60 (Shelbyville Road) offers bank and wading access to Floyd's Fork. Access will improve as the Parklands of Floyd's Fork project continues over the next couple of years.

In-line spinners, small suspending jerkbaits in chrome, chartreuse or orange colors fished on 4-pound test with spinning gear score well on rainbows in early spring.

Kentucky anglers who want catch fish close to home need to visit one of the Fishing in Neighborhoods lakes. Lakes in this program regularly receive stockings of trout and catfish. Fisheries personnel for Kentucky Fish and Wildlife monitor the largemouth bass and sunfish populations in these lakes and stock these species if needed to maintain consistent fishing. These lakes make ideal places to take family members, children and beginners fishing with an excellent chance of catching something.

Camp Ernst Lake in Boone County, Madisonville City Park Lake North in Hopkins County, Millennium Park Pond in Boyle County, Whitehall Park Lake in Madison County, Waymond Morris Park Lake in Daviess County along with Carlson and Dickerson lakes at Ft. Knox in Meade County are new additions to the FINs program for 2012. For more information on the FINs lakes, visit the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife homepage on the internet at fw.ky.gov or pick up a free copy of the 2012 Kentucky Fishing and Boating Guide.

ment, in my opinion," Fitzpatrick said.

He said the win over Roeder was big.

"I was a lot more aggressive," Fitzpatrick said. "He actually punched me in the eye during the match so I felt like I definitely needed to come out with a win. With that win I was done for the day, so that was a huge win. I could get a chance to rest and recuperate."

Fitzpatrick regrouped to beat Fairdale's Anthony Jennings, 6-4 in overtime, before falling to Union County's Reshawd Wilkins in the medal round. Perry Central's Steve Hollon took control early and defeated Fitzpatrick 12-2 in the seventh-place match.

And while Fitzpatrick says it was a disappointment, Saturday night was still the fulfillment of a prediction by his parents. "My family has been going to the state finals ever since I was a little boy and my parents told me while we were watching the heavyweights receive their medals, that someday I would be standing on that podium."

Travis Kaelin (195 pounds) advanced to within one win of making the medal round but had the misfortune of running into Bobby Bryant, the eventual state champ from Louisville Trinity, in the quarterfinals. Bryant, who did not have a close match in his run to the title, put a 16-5 major decision on Kaelin and he never recovered.

In the match to determine who would advance to the medal round, Kaelin, ranked fifth statewide, suffered a 4-3 upset by St. Xavier's Matt May, who entered the tournament ranked 12th. May eventually finished fifth.

Kaelin had gotten off to a big start, surviving an upset bid by ninth-ranked Rodney Rednour of Wayne County in the first round. On two separate occasions, Rednour seemed to have Kaelin pinned.

At the end of the first period, Kaelin appeared to be saved by the bell, but in the second frame, Rednour was called for an illegal hold, giving Kaelin new life. The Anderson senior recovered and advanced with a 9-6 win. He also rallied late, taking control with two escapes midway through the second period, to defeat Paducah Tilghman's Derik Overstreet in the second round.

Anderson's only regional champion, 145-pounder Eric Spencer, also got off to a good start, pinning Perry Central's Chance Neace in their first-round bout. But all that earned Spencer was a date with Walton-Verona's Logan Jones.

Even though Spencer was seeded as a No. 1 and Jones a No. 2, it was Jones who dominated the 8-1 match in his march to the final. Jones eventually lost to Simon Kenton's Kevin Cooper in a rematch of their regional final.

In the consolation round, Spencer went down to Cooper's Trent Presnell, 11-8.

Chris McDaniel, at 126 pounds, recovered after a first-round loss to Campbell County's Sean Fausz, ranked third and the eventual third-place winner. McDaniel scored a pair of pins before being eliminated by Henry Clay's David Tudri.

Anderson had high hopes for Austin Dillow, at 132 pounds, and T.W. Stockton at 138. Both had come into the tournament ranked in the state's Top 10 but were not able to advance in the championship round. Dillow suffered a bit of an upset to South Oldham's Tino Velez, who prevailed 7-5 in overtime.

Stockton had the misfortune of drawing Woodford County's Shane White, the eventual fifth-place finisher, in the first round. White pinned Stockton near the end of the second period.

Stockton and Dillow both won a consolation match but were unable to advance past the second consolation round.

Zack Perry (152), Jake Vincent (160) and Alex Swartz (182) all recovered from first-round losses to win a consolation match but could not advance further.

Every basketball season, one of the questions around Kentucky high school basketball is simply, "Which region is the toughest?" From the looks of the statewide computer polls, the Eighth Region has regained its place as one of Kentucky's best in girls' basketball this year.

In Monday's Rating the State, published by the Lexington Herald-Leader, three Eighth Region teams - Anderson County, South Oldham and Walton-Verona - were all ranked among the state's Top 25. All were expected to breeze into the regional by winning a district semi-final game this week.

But having some power in the Eighth is nothing new. Twenty years ago, the Eighth was considered by many to be Kentucky's best, including the powerful regions around Louisville, Lexington and the Cincinnati suburbs. During that time from about 1990 to 1996, arguably the best girls' high school basketball in Kentucky was played inside that golden triangle formed by Interstates 64, 75 and 71.

From 1992-96, the region produced a state champion, two Miss Basketballs and a high school All-American. Three from the region went win NCAA national championships and two of them, high school teammates at that, went on to play in the WNBA. "The Eighth Region was definitely very tough. Shelby County had a really top team. Bullitt East had a top player with Becky McKinley. Oldham County had a great team. There was a lot of talent. Any time you go out, you could get beat," remembers Ukari Figgs, the 1995 Miss Basketball from Scott County.

Now the Assistant Athletics Director for Women's Basketball at the University of Kentucky, Figgs went on to win the 1999 national championship at Purdue with her Scott teammate, Camille Cooper. Figgs was named the Most Outstanding Player in that year's Final Four.

Figgs also played five years in the WNBA, winning a championship with the Los Angeles Sparks in 2001. "The Eighth Region was very tough," recalls former Oldham County All-American Kyra Elzy. "A lot of teams could have come out of that region and won the championship but we knocked each other around along the way."

Now the associate head coach for UK's women's team, Elzy went on to play on two national championship teams for Pat Summitt at Tennessee.

McKinley won the state's Miss Basketball in 1992, while Shelby's Kim Cunningham and Bullitt East's Allison Bass were also Kentucky All-Stars. Unknown to the rest of the state, Grant County's Bradie Bowen had also made quite a hit, earning a place on the Kentucky All-Stars in 1995 while tiny Eminence was being led by a dynamite guard named Chrissy Roberts.

All Roberts did was lead Eminence to a district title when it upset Shelby County in the championship game. She signed with Kentucky but eventually transferred to Eastern Kentucky, where she led the nation in 3-point shooting. Roberts is now the Colonels' head coach.

All of that talent. All of those great teams.

And all compacted in the 17 high schools inside the "Golden Triangle."

"There was a stretch there where Oldham County, Scott County and Bullitt East were all capable of winning the state tournament. The year Scott won it (1995), they might not have been the best team in the region. Coming in, Oldham and Bullitt East were the best teams on paper," says former Shelby coach Jim Wright. Elzy remembers it well.

Her Oldham County team was ranked No. 1 in the state but on the Colonels' home floor, Figgs buried a jumper as time ran out to send Scott, not Oldham to the Sweet 16. The Cardinals took the state title three years before the school's now-storied boys' program won its first.

"I feel like (Figgs) has what was supposed to be Oldham County's championship," Elzy said with a smile.

"My junior year, we pretty much had them beat," Figgs recalls. "They came back and won in overtime. We had some memorable battles. It was a lot of fun. We have a lot of memories and friendship."

Ironically, Oldham had won the region's first title nine years earlier. The Eighth has not had another state champion, although Shelby finished as state runner-up in 2000.

It was a special period of time, one that those involved realized was such, but even then might not have realized just how extraordinary that time was.

"We all had respect for each other. It wasn't like it was anything nasty," Figgs remembers. "I remember when we would play Shelby County. (Wright) would always give me some pointers to improve my game. And I think that every time we would play them, he would give me a word of encouragement."

"You don't forget people like that even though they are your opponents."

Next week, Anderson County, Walton-Verona and South Oldham give the region what should be its strongest field since the current alignment went into effect in 2006. While Walton-Verona won the All-A Classic last month, none of the region's Big 3 are considered equal to the state's elite at DuPont Manual or Marion County.

Can any of the current teams compare to what the region saw 20 years ago?

Wright says it is hard to compare different eras, but notes that realignment and new schools have altered the landscape. "The region is different now," said Wright, who is retired and lives in Shelbyville. "Scott County and Bullitt East are gone."

Scott went to the 11th Region and Bullitt East to the Sixth (it is now in the Seventh) in the 2006 realignment.

Wright continued. "Shelby County is two schools now. Oldham County was split again (when North Oldham formed in 2003.)

"And the game is different. The Kentucky coach uses the dribble drive, so you see more kids just driving to the basket."

Twenty years ago, just driving out of the girls' Eighth Region might have been the toughest job in Kentucky high school sports.

"It was great for our state to have those rivalries and those players," Elzy remembers. "I am glad that I am a part of the Eighth Region."

Region's best ever? Depends on who you ask

Little debate that current UK staffers top the list

With the girls' Eighth Region Tournament coming to Anderson County next week, there will always be comparisons of the top teams and players from years before.

Where does South Oldham's Jasmine Whitfield rank among the region's all-time greats? Can Anderson County's Eriel McKee or Makenzie Cann eventually be considered in that elite group? What about Owen County's Rianna Gayheart, who has been a star at Owen County since bursting on the scene as an eighth-grader in 2008.

Talk to 10 different longtime fans and chances are you will get 10 different answers.

Except, that is, for who should be at the top: Kyra Elzy and Ukari Figgs.

Or should it be Ukari Figgs and Kyra Elzy?

Figgs, Kentucky's Miss Basketball in 1995, graduated from Scott County a year before Elzy finished her career at Oldham County. Elzy did not get to wear No. 1 against Indiana that summer as Highlands' Jamie Walz was picked.

But Elzy was a high school All-American and one Eighth Region media member has called her "the gold standard of the Eighth Region."

Former Shelby County coach Jim Wright won four regional championships during his 13 years and coached against both. He was recently asked who was the best.

"That one is not easy," he said with a big smile. "I don't know if you can do that. You couldn't go wrong with either of those."

"Ukari was a great point guard and she could shoot the three. She could drive and was like a coach on the floor."

"Kyra was so quick. Her first step on offense was so great. She was such a quick jumper. I just don't know how you can pick one."

What is certain, though, is the mid-90's rivalry set the standard for all that follow in the Eighth Region.

Anderson County's Alex Avritt looks for a way to get around Franklin County's Dasia Kilbourne in the early going of the Lady Bearcats' romp Friday.

GIRLS

the regular season at 16-14.

Sydney Brown, playing in her final regular-season home game, was a big part of that. The senior scored 16 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to lead Anderson in both categories. But from the Anderson viewpoint, the biggest stat was not in the scorebook. The fire in Brown's eyes could not be measured.

"This felt good," Brown smiled. "This was one of my better games."

On the year?

"For my career," Brown said with a bigger smile. "We haven't beaten Franklin County in a while."

To be exact, the Lady Bearcats had not beaten Franklin since 2007, a year before Brown made her varsity debut as an eighth-grader.

Friday, the Jacksonville State signee scored Anderson's first six points, then tallied the Lady Bearcats' first three baskets of the second half as well. All but two of her points came on rebounds or moves on the blocks. It is exactly what the Lady Bearcats have been wanting from their 6-foot-1 post player.

"We have high expectations for Sydney," Kays said. "We have had for her whole career. She has had some peaks and valleys but she has been playing well lately. I think it is starting to set in that this is it for her."

Brown was far from Anderson's only weapon, though. Sophomore Eriel McKee scored 14 points and matched Brown's rebound total.

Another sophomore, Makenzie Cann, scored 10 points and dealt 8 assists.

Corrin Robinson scored 6 points while Alex Avritt turned in a stellar defensive game, holding Franklin's Raven Timmons to 5 points.

"We got good bench production," Kays said. "We got 21 points off the bench. Danielle Watson came off the bench for 7 points and Kaci Currens gave us a boost of the bench. That is a good sign."

Currens, an eighth-grader, also scored seven points.

But despite a scoring parade that listed 10 different Lady Bearcats, Kays held his team's defense up as the standard for victory.

At halftime, Anderson already had a 33-14 lead, was comfortably in control and had about as much chance of blowing the lead as Frankfort politicians agreeing on something. But he still issued a challenge.

"I told the kids I wanted to hold Franklin County to under 40 points," he said before adding a wry smile. "We shattered that."

"Tonight, we played extremely well. When we play like that, it is going to be hard to beat us."

Seth Carmichael claims a rebound during the second half of Anderson County's win over Franklin County. Carmichael later rebounded a missed free throw and fired a pass to Spencer Ruggles for the game-winning 3-pointer.

who helped out, joining Carmichael in a double-team at the left of the free throw lane. The two forced Timmons to lose control of the ball.

As time ran out, the Anderson student section flooded the floor in a show of emotion not seen at Anderson's home gym in recent years.

"Coach told me to deny the drive and try to contain him," Carmichael said.

"(Timmons) bumped into me and lost the ball," Ruggles said.

"We felt like Timmons would be the guy they would go to," Anderson coach Glen Drury said. "Our two guys did a great job fronting him. They came up with a huge play."

If anything, Anderson's win Friday might have been a microcosm of the 2011-12 season.

Left for dead and not given much chance of beating the Flyers Friday, the Bearcats got off to a big start, grabbing a lead that topped out at 21-11 when Ruggles connected in the lane to open the scoring in the second quarter. It was eerily reminiscent of November's low expectations erased by Anderson's 11-0 start.

But just as January brought a lull, the Bearcats sputtered a bit in the second quarter, but still led 30-26 at the break. But Franklin, or more specifically, Ryan Timmons, appeared to be ready to ruin the Bearcats' Senior Night. Timmons converted steals on Anderson's first four possessions into baskets, giving Franklin a 34-30 lead before Drury could call timeout.

"Timmons was in total control of the basketball game," Drury said of the junior, who could be a Mr. Football candidate next year. "He could play football or basketball, whatever he wants to do."

Timmons finished with 31 points.

Franklin eventually got the lead to 40-32 before the Bearcats started showing life again.

Anderson got within 43-42 when Darrin Laswell connected on a three-pointer, but Timmons, who had 16 of Franklin's 19 third-quarter points, got to the bucket for a layup inside the quarter's final second.

Franklin still seemed to be in control after a 5-0 spurt gave the Flyers a 52-45 lead and they still led 59-52 with four minutes remaining.

But Jay Smith, who led Anderson with 17 points, connected on a three, then scored in the land to make it 59-57 a minute later.

"At times, Smith was just matching Timmons. We had a lot of kids make plays for us," Drury said.

Anderson outrebounded the Flyers, 40-29 with Ruggles and Austin Hall controlling the paint at times. "We got to give Ruggles and Hall a lot of credit for what they did," Drury said.

Franklin still seemed to be in control, leading 63-58 after Casey Tabor sank two free throws with 42.2 seconds left, but nine seconds later, Smith swished one from well behind the arc to make it a two-point game. "I have no idea," Smith said of the distance of his shot. I saw the clock said about 30 seconds."

After Carmichael came up with a steal, Smith missed the front end of the bonus on two separate occasions.

But on the second, Carmichael came up with the rebound.

When it counted most, Anderson finally found an answer.

"We made plays when it was on the line. Players have to make plays," Drury said.

The wild celebration that ensued was undoubtedly in reaction to the Bearcats beating their old rival, but could also be a summary of the Anderson season, regardless of what

While Spencer Ruggles misfired on this shot it is the same form he used to sink a 3-pointer with 9.4 seconds to play to give Anderson County a win over Franklin County.

Bearcats go to big city, beat Country Day

Darrin Laswell scored 17 points, leading four Anderson County players in double figures as the Bearcats defeated Kentucky Country Day, 59-48, last Tuesday in Louisville.

"I thought we played one of our better games," Anderson head coach Glen Drury. "We got a lot of good games out of a lot of kids down there."

Anderson jumped to a 15-10 lead and never looked back against a team that finished the regular season at 14-12.

"Country Day is a good basketball team. They gave us some matchup problems and they have beaten North Oldham and Spencer County," Drury said.

Country Day also defeated Apollo early in the season. Anderson improved to 19-7 with the victory while Country Day dropped to 14-12.

happened in Tuesday's 30th District Tournament opener against Spencer County.

A year ago, Anderson finished the regular season at 7-16. Friday saw Anderson celebrate 20 wins for the first time since the Sweet 16 year of 2009. This year, Drury lightened the schedule a bit, but the Bearcats did beat two of the stronger teams on the slate, Franklin County and Collins. They have played well heading into the post-season.

It is believed to be the first time Anderson has won 20 games in the regular season since 1984-85. (The Sweet 16 teams of 1997 and 2009 both won 19 before the district and regional tournaments began.) It is a rare feat in high school basketball these days.

"Twenty wins. That was one of our goals we talked about," Ruggles said.

"It is a great feeling to get 20 wins, no matter who you beat," Carmichael added.

"I don't think anyone in their stretch of imagination would have thought 20 wins," Drury said. "They would have thought Houdini (might do it.) You got to give these boys a lot of credit for what they have done."

And Friday night, it was a reason for celebration.

Christian Academy's Jared Slaughter goes for a basket in a game earlier this season. He scored 20 points against Community Christian.

Rams improved despite losses to Community, Northside

From staff reports

Community Christian Academy of Independence defeated home-standing Christian Academy of Lawrenceburg, 87-63, recently.

The Crusaders might be the best team the Rams will face all season. Community Christian is an experienced team that plays five seniors with the majority of them being the starters. Head coach Ryan Smith said before the game that a couple of the starters have been playing on the same team since middle school.

That connection was obvious as the Crusaders players Johnathan Schoonover and Alex Clemmons showed that they were in tune to each other's game. Schoonover, who would score 19 points, comes from a family of good basketball players who have played well against Christian Academy.

But the game's high scorer will go to Clemmons who scored 39 points, showing what the Rams were up against. They really stepped up to the plate and played their best game of the season. The Rams rose to the level of the team they were playing.

The Rams did a good job pushing the ball inside the paint which opened it up for outside shots. Christian Academy's outside shooters took advantage.

Jared Slaughter was team high scorer with 20 points and Matthew Robinson scored 10. Although the Crusaders led the entire game, the Rams did not give up and outscored the Crusaders in the fourth quarter.

The Rams came away holding their heads up because they know they did their best. Ram coach Cory Robinson said, "This was a tough loss against a great team, but our boys are back to playing basketball the way they need to be."

The Rams played host to the Northside Christian Academy of Louisville last Monday but dropped a 68-59 overtime decision. Northside had beaten Christian Academy 60-46 in an earlier game when the Rams were plagued by 20-plus turnovers.

Robinson has been stressing making smart decisions when handling the ball under pressure.

It was a bittersweet night for the Rams since it was the last regular season game of the year, and it was also Senior Night.

Christian Academy honored three seniors: Michael Kuiper and Zach Grey who have played for the Rams since middle school, and Jared Slaughter who joined the Rams this year.

They were recognized with their parents before the start of the game.

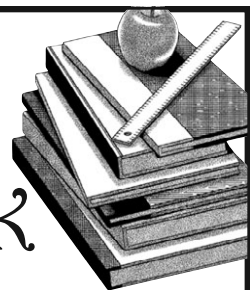

Kuiper got his first start of the season, and made it count by scoring the first points of the game.

This game that showed how much the Rams have improved over the season. The outside shooting was key for staying in the game, and the ball handling has improved as the season has progressed. In the fourth quarter, the Rams really tightened up their defense out-scoring the Gators 17-4 which forced the team's second overtime game of the year.

Robinson said, "We played a tough game on our Senior Night that went into overtime. Even though we fell short it was a good game to prepare us for the state tournament."

LEGAL NOTICES

MASTER COMMISSIONER'S SALE
In order to comply with the orders of the Anderson Circuit Court, the Master Commissioner will sell the property described in the following actions on Thursday, February 23, 2012, at 11:00 a.m. in the Anderson County Courthouse, Lawrenceburg, Kentucky. The property shall be sold to raise the amounts herein-after set forth, together with interest and the costs of this action, and upon the following terms and conditions (unless otherwise indicated):

1) At the time of the sale, the successful bidder shall either pay cash or make a deposit of ten percent (10%) of the purchase price, with the balance on credit for thirty (30) days. In the event the successful bidder elects to credit the balance, he or she will be required to post bond and furnish surety acceptable to the Master Commissioner. The bond shall be for the unpaid purchase price and bear interest and the rate of twelve percent (12%) per annum until paid in full.

(2) PLEASE NOTE: The real estate SHALL BE SOLD SUBJECT TO ALL city, state, county, and school real estate taxes, whether current or delinquent.

(3) Where the real estate has insurable improvements, the successful bidder shall, at his or her own expense, carry fire and extended coverage insurance on said improvements from the date of sale until the purchase price is fully paid, to the extent of the Court appraised value of said improvements or the unpaid balance of the purchase price, whichever is less, at a minimum, with a loss clause payable to the Master Commissioner or the appropriate Plaintiff. Failure of the successful bidder to effect such insurance shall not affect the validity of the sale or the successful bidder's liability thereunder, but shall entitle, but not require, the Plaintiff(s) to effect said insurance and furnish the policy or evidence thereof to the Master Commissioner, if it so desires, and the premium thereon or the property portion thereof shall be charged to the successful bidder as the successful bidder's cost.

(4) The property shall otherwise be sold free and clear of any right, title and interest of all parties to the action and of their liens and encumbrances thereon excepting easements and restrictions of record in the Anderson County Clerk's Office, and such right of redemption which may exist in favor of the United States of America or the Defendant(s), and any matters disclosed by an accurate survey and inspection of the property.

You see, one reads it, then passes it on.

Then another reads it and passes it on.

And so forth.
